8. READING

Social Networks

Do the names MySpace, Facebook, Tuenti, etc. ring a bell? They are some of the most popular sites on the Internet today. These sites are all called 'social networking' sites because they help people meet and discuss things online. Each of these sites has its own strengths: MySpace is especially popular among teenagers; Facebook is popular with university students; Tuenti is especially used in Spain. The common factor between all of them is that they offer a place for people to interact. They are not sites where you go to read or listen to content.

Social networks are considered to be web 2.0. What does this mean? Back in the 1990s, the original Internet (often called web 1.0) was a place to go to read articles, listen to music, get information, etc. Most people didn't contribute to the sites.

In 2003 a site named MySpace was a big boom. It quickly became popular among young users and many people developed social networking sites. The sites didn't provide 'content' to people, they helped people create, communicate and share what they loved including music, images and videos. The key to the success of these sites was that they provided a platform on which users create the content.

Counting on users to create content is the key to the success of web 2.0 companies. All of these companies depend on the desire of users to communicate with each other, thereby creating the 'content' that others want to consume.

a) Read the text and circle True or False, according to the information given in the text.

- a) MySpace, Facebook and Tuenti are Internet sites where people can interact. TRUE / FALSE
- b) In the 1990's, web 2.0 was already working. TRUE / FALSE
- c) At the beginning, the Internet gave its users the possibility to contribute to the sites. TRUE / FALSE
- d) Web 2.0 companies depend on the users' wish to exchange films and music. TRUE / FALSE

b) Answer these questions on the text:

a) Why are MySpace, Facebook and Tuenti called "social networking" sites?

b) What is the key to the success of web 2.0 companies?
