Mystery Island

Before you watch

Write summer holidays on the board and ask the children to suggest things they like to do in the summer holidays and write them on the board. Invite the class to guess how you spend the summer holidays, giving them clues or miming to help them guess. Tell the class that the story is about three children and an adventure they have on their summer holidays.

While you watch

Speculate: pause on the scene with the children in the tower. Draw the children's attention to the question: How can they escape? and ask the class to suggest ways the children might escape from the tower. Accept all their answers and then see if anyone was right by watching the next part of the story.

After you watch

Check the children's comprehension by eliciting the names of the three children: Star, Leo and Avril. Then ask the children to remember the presents the people on the island give each child and how they use them: They give Star a sword which shines brightly and blinds the businessman and his friends. They give Leo a compass which points to the blue symbol in the tower. They give Avril a book which shows that the blue symbol means that they have to push the magic door.

Using the worksheets

Worksheet 1

Read and complete the sentences.

Write the first sentence on the board: Star looks through a telescope and sees the _____. Read it with the children and elicit the missing word from them (island). Tell the children to complete the other sentences. If this is challenging for them, guide them by writing the initial letter of each word on the board: 1 = i; 2 = b; 3 = m; 4 = b; 5 = c, P; 6 = m, c.

Look at the pictures, find mistakes and write.

Tell the children to look at the first picture and ask them to tell you how it is different from the story (Avril doesn't want to play football, she wants to paint). Elicit the two words needed to complete the sentences. Then tell the children to look at the other pictures, find a mistake and finish the sentences below them.

Worksheet 3

Cross out two extra letters and write.

Ask the children to look at the first picture and elicit the word (compass). Then write c u o m p a s s e on the board and explain that there are two extra letters. Invite a volunteer to the front to cross out the extra letters. Ask the children to cross out the extra letters in the other words and then write the correct form on the line.

Extension

Play Family Trees. Remind the children of the Polidoor family tree and ask them to make a family tree with their brothers, sisters, parents and grandparents.

Summer holidays. Ask the children to write a brief description of how they spend their summer holidays and draw a picture.

You go into the hall and there are the stairs to the first floor. Here's Victoria's bedroom. It's bigger than mine. She's really tidy, not like me. There's the bathroom with the loo and a shower.

I live in a basement flat. In our flat the bath and the loo are in one room. My bedroom's quite small, really. My kitchen's small. Just a cooker and a fridge. Here's Victoria's. It's bigger than mine.

Victoria: Right. Do you want to go for a walk?

Shima: Yeah, that sounds like a good idea.

Victoria: What's your neighbourhood like?

Shima: I love it because all my friends live nearby.

Michael: I live in Hampstead in North London. The difference between Ealing and Hampstead primarily is that Hampstead is better located. It's easier to get to the West End where the clubs and the restaurants are.

Zoe: I used to live in London. London's good because it has things to do, things that stay open all twenty-four hours. I prefer living in London because all my friends are there. In Brighton there isn't such a variety of things to do.

Shima: My friend Jimmy lives in that detached house over there. He lives with his parents. Dumani's uncle lives in that semi-detached house. He's crazy about his garden. Sean's family live in that terraced house. It's a beautiful square, really expensive. Now, that's my grandma's bungalow over there. She feels happy in a one-storey house. Oh, that's a cottage.

Victoria: What are those buildings?

Shima: That's the local council estate. This is my local library. You can borrow books, read newspapers and magazines and you can borrow CDs and even videos to watch at home. Here's the station. There are trains every twenty minutes. The local shops are nearby. It only takes me five minutes from my flat. This is the greengrocer's. It's open late which is great for me and it's also open on Sundays. And this is the post office. There's also a theatre and lots of clubs and discos. The food's vegetarian. It's delicious.

Victoria: London's full of Indians, Afro Caribbeans, Pakistanis. They've all got speciality shops. This shop sells Indian sarees. I'm buying a bindi. Nice, isn't it?

Mr. Hussein: I live in the East of London. I've been in this country for twenty-seven years. This is a very special area for us. It's a Bengali area. And we still have a lot of different nationalities coming in and visiting us.

Victoria: People observe their national traditions here: national dress, hair styles and of course local food.

Karim: I live in Whitechapel, which is about five minutes away from Brick Lane. I'm the managing director of an Asian supermarket which is based in Brick Lane. So you can get fresh vegetables, fish...

Victoria: This is Carnaby Street in Central London. In the sixties it was the centre of London fashion. It's still a popular tourist spot. It's got some fun cafés too.

Spike: Hello, there. I'm Spike and you're sitting in my restaurant, Alphabet. And we're in Soho which is right in the very heart of London. There are lots of people from all around the world here. Chinatown in London is the biggest in the UK.

Victoria: This is Hampstead Village, home of artists and writers, like John.

John Foley: I'm a writer and an actor and I've been living in Hampstead for about four and a half years. There have been many writers and artists living here or working here or visiting here and one of the most famous who lived here was Robert Louis Stevenson, the author of Treasure Island and many other wonderful adventure stories.

Michael: My name is Michael Kenny. I live in Hampstead in North London. Hampstead village is very special. It has a great choice of restaurants. It's a super place to live.

Victoria: Finally, we're in Brixton. It's the centre of London Afro Caribbean community. Electric is the home of Brixton market.

Grandma: These are beautiful! How kind of you. Thank you so much.

Mum: Well, shall we eat? Robert: Great, I'm starving.

Everybody: Oh, look!

Victoria: Happy birthday.

Grandma: Thank you, darling.

Victoria: Right. Blow out the candles.

Grandma: I wish...

Mum: No, you mustn't say that loud or it won't come true.

Grandma: There. Wish. Now, who'd like some cake?

Robert: Me, please.

Grandma: This is for your mother. Could you pass it to her, please?

Robert: I'd like a big slice, please.

Dad: How about a glass of champagne?

Mum: Can I have a big glass, please?

Dad: Of course you can, darling.

Victoria: How many people in your family?

Chris: In my family we have four people, my mother, my father and my sister.

Kevin: In my family we have five people. There's me, my mum, my dad and my two sisters.

Victoria: Tell me something you've done with your family recently.

Indira: In the summer me and my family went for a family holiday to France.

Chris: We recently got a dog in my family, which was quite exciting.

Kevin: Not much has really happened in our family at the moment.

Dad: Has everybody got some cake and champagne?

Everybody: Yes.

Grandpa: It's grandma's birthday today, sixty years old, and I'd like to say that she's been a wonderful wife, a marvellous mother and a lovely grandmother. And so I will propose a toast to the most wonderful grandma in all the world. Happy birthday!

Everybody: Happy birthday!

The Chat Room

Before you read

Write Hobbies on the board and elicit its meaning. Ask the class to suggest some hobbies and write them on the board. Put the children in pairs and give them three minutes to add more hobbies to the list. Elicit hobbies from the pairs and write them on the board. Then tell the class that you're thinking of a hobby and invite them to ask you questions to discover what it is. When they've guessed your hobby, invite volunteers to think of hobbies for the class to ask about and guess.

While you read

After reading page 16, ask the class some questions about Alex and Evie: How do they feel? Do they want to be friends? Why do they like each other? What can Alex do to make friends with Evie? Encourage them to discuss how the girls feel and what they would do to make friends with someone after an argument.

After you read

Ask the class to suggest things they like doing with their friends and say why friends are important. Tell the class about one of your friends, the things you do together and why you like her/him. Invite volunteers to talk about one of their friends and say why they like them.

Using the worksheets

Worksheet 1

1 Look back at the story and complete.

Ask the children to look at the picture of Alex and ask: How does she feel? Read out the speech bubble: I didn't pass my computer exam. Tell the children to look back at the book and complete the other speech bubbles.

2 Read and write Alex or Evie.

Write Alex and Evie on the board and ask the class to say what they know about each girl without looking back at the book: Alex likes tennis, Evie is a new girl, etc. Then tell the children to complete the sentences looking back at the book to see if the sentences describe Alex or Evie.

Worksheet 2

1 Read The Chat Room and answer.

Ask the children to read the story again and then answer the questions. Correct the answers as a class.

2 Unscramble and write.

Ask the children to look at the pictures and write the words using the letters around each picture. When they've finished, tell them to check their answers in the picture dictionary. Ask children to write scrambled versions of six other words from the story and then give them to a partner to solve.

Worksheet 3

1 Read the message and reply.

Ask the children to read the message from Tilly quietly. Then ask questions to check their understanding: Has Tilly got a pet? What's her brother's name? What are Tilly's favourite subjects? Tell the children that they're going to write back to Tilly and tell her about their lives. Elicit ideas from the children of things they can tell Tilly about: their family, their hobbies, their school and so on. When the children have finished their message, tell them to draw two pictures that show their hobbies, family or friends. Collect the messages, read one out without saying who it's from and ask the children to guess whose message it is.

Extension

Draw a Venn Diagram (two overlapping circles). Ask the children to work with a friend. They draw a large Venn Diagram and write one name at the top of one circle and one name at the top of the other. They think of different hobbies and write the ones they have in common where the circles overlap. Finally, the children illustrate the diagram with small pictures of the hobbies under the words.

Do you set the table, make your bed or do the washing-up? Do you think you help a lot at home?

Three hundred years ago, in colonial America, children had to help more than you can imagine! They did the same work that their parents did every day.

Boys had to chop trees and hunt animals for food. They also did farming. They helped to plant crops like corn and wheat, and collect the food when it was ready. When they were nine years old, they started learning a trade or working at a business. They learned to make things with metal or wood, how to work in a shop or even how to be a doctor.

Girls had completely different jobs than boys. They helped to cook the food. They used vegetables that they grew in the garden and the meat from animals that the men hunted. They didn't only feed their families. They took care of the farm animals, too. They also cleaned the house and spent a whole day every week washing the clothes. In their free time, they made soap and candles. They learned to sew at an early age. They could make beautiful dresses and blankets. They also took care of their younger brothers and sisters.

Other jobs children did included bringing fresh water to the house, collecting eggs from the chickens, cutting the wool from sheep and emptying the chamber pots where people went to the bathroom.

When they weren't helping around the house, children played and had fun. They played a game similar to baseball and liked flying kites on windy days.

Rome is a city with an amazing history. You can see ancient buildings, like the Colosseum. But did you know that a popular food in Rome is even older than those buildings? You can find it in many restaurants all over the world. Maybe you had some for lunch! This delicious treat isn't new. In 200 BC, people wrote about a kind of pizza. It was round, flat bread with olive oil and herbs. Three hundred years later, people added meat, cheese and garlic. Is this starting to sound familiar? People used the bread as a plate for other food. Then, they ate the "pizza" plate when they finished their meal. But what about tomato sauce? That wasn't added to the pizza until explorers brought tomatoes back from South America – five hundred years ago. Poor people in Italy added the tomatoes to their special bread and the modern pizza was born. At that time, most people bought pizzas in the street, but in 1830, a pizza bakery in Naples, Italy made a restaurant where people could eat their pizzas. It was the first pizzeria. In 1957, the first frozen pizza was available. People could buy them and bake them at home. Pizza delivery also started around this time. You could call the pizzeria and ask them to bring you a pizza. Now pizzas come in all shapes and sizes, with many different toppings, or ingredients. One restaurant in New York sells pizzas with gold on them! But the most authentic pizza has only got tomato, cheese, olive oil and herbs.

1. The first one opened in 1830.
2. An ingredient from South America.
3. Pizza is a kind of...
4. An ancient Roman building.
5. The shape of a pizza is...
6. The ingredients on a pizza.
7. When people bring your pizza to your house.
8. The city where modern pizza was born.

It was a hot, sunny summer day and David took his dog Lucky to the park. They walked around the park and played Frisbee. Suddenly, dark clouds appeared and it got windy. David could hear thunder in the distance. Lucky started barking. He knew that a storm was coming. And then, Lucky started running through the park. David tried to follow him, but Lucky ran very fast. It was starting to rain and David heard thunder again. It was louder - the storm was getting closer. He needed to find Lucky and go home. Then, he ran up a hill and saw Lucky sitting in the grass next to a girl. She was standing under a tree because of the rain. David shouted to her, "Don't stand there. It's dangerous!" But she didn't hear him. It started to rain harder. The wind pulled at the tree leaves. Lucky decided to do something. He took the girl's rucksack and started running. The girl chased him. Lucky ran to a picnic pavilion and put the bag on the ground. David got to the pavilion and they waited for the storm to stop. Suddenly, there was a flash of lightning and a loud clap of thunder. "Look!" the girl shouted. The tree was black and part of it was on the ground. "Lightning struck the tree where I was standing!" "Wow. You're very lucky!" David told her. "No, luck didn't save me. Lucky saved me!" the girl said, laughing. Lucky barked happily. The storm was going away and the sun was coming out.

They used to have the same party and the same presents, but now they are twelve years old and it's more difficult. Dan and Sam look the same but are very different. Sam likes cake and chocolate but Dan likes sandwiches and fruit. Sam likes loud rock music but Dan prefers classical music. Sam likes watching films in his free time, but Dan prefers board games. This year, their mum and dad decided to have two different parties on the same day but in different rooms.

"I'll organize Sam's party," Dad said.
 "OK, I'll organize Dan's party," Mum said. When the boys got home from school on their birthday, Dad took Sam into the living room and told him to close his eyes. Mum took Dan to the patio and told him to close his eyes. Then, Mum and Dad both shouted "Open your eyes!"

The boys looked around in amazement. All of Sam's friends were in the living room with arms full of presents. The table was covered in cake and chocolate and there was a large screen on the wall to show a film. Loud rock music was playing.

All of Dan's friends were out on the patio. The tables were covered with sandwiches and fruit. There were lots of games to play, too. There was classical music playing. The boys didn't say anything!

"Well what do you think, Dan?" said Mum.
 "Well what do you think, Sam?" said Dad. Then, Sam turned smiling and said.
 "But Mum, I'm not Dan. I'm Sam. I think I'm at the wrong party!"

Read and answer the questions.

*What do people eat in space?
When we think of space food, it's easy to imagine shiny, foil packages of dehydrated ice cream and blocks of mysterious proteins with the names of common dishes. This is pretty similar to what astronauts ate on their first space missions.*

The first space food came in tubes like toothpaste or in dehydrated cubes. It didn't taste very good and the astronauts complained. Over time, NASA developed a menu of dehydrated foods like shrimp cocktail, apple sauce or chicken with vegetables. The astronauts used water to prepare the foods. Astronauts also had Space Sticks, a kind of food bar to eat in space. In the 1960s, people were very excited about space. Children could buy Space Sticks at the shop to try.

Nowadays, space food is very different. Astronauts have a large menu of dishes to choose from before their space flights. Doctors check the menus to make sure that the astronauts will receive the necessary vitamins and minerals from their meals. A famous chef, Emeril Lagasse, even prepared a special dish for the astronauts to eat on Mardi Gras. There is an area where they can heat the food on the space shuttle or in the space station. Astronauts also take fresh foods, like bread, fruit and vegetables into space.

In the future, food technology will be very important. If the astronauts go to Mars, they will need to have lots of food because they will be in space for a long time. They will still take food packets like they do now, but they will also need to grow their own food. Scientists are investigating ways for the astronauts to grow grain and vegetables in space to make their own space food.

1. Why did astronauts complain about the first space food?

2. What kind of space food could children buy?

3. What fresh foods can astronauts eat?

4. Why will astronauts need to grow their own food?

Joshua and Jemima went to school in a small town. One Friday, they stayed late to finish a project. As they were leaving, they saw flashes of light from behind a door. Suddenly, green smoke came out of the room. The children ran out of the school. "What was that?" Jemima asked as they walked home. "I have no idea!" Joshua answered. "Let's try to investigate on Monday," he added. On Monday, Joshua and Jemima went to school as usual. They had a plan to find the room at break. But at break there was a special game and they couldn't go. After school, their mum was waiting for them outside.

They watched the school from the car. They saw more lights through one of the windows. It was the room! They saw a woman with strange goggles look out of the window. Then, the car went around a corner and they couldn't see anymore.

The next day at break, they escaped from the group and went to look for the room. When they found it, there were no flashes of light. Joshua carefully opened the door. The room had a funny smell, and there were all kinds of test tubes and chemicals in the room. "What is this place?" Joshua asked. "Maybe a mad scientist works here," Jemima said.

Suddenly, they realized that they were not alone. They turned around slowly. It was the woman from the window. She had long curly hair and she was wearing purple goggles. She looked like an alien. Joshua and Jemima were terrified.

"Can I help you two find something?" she asked as she took her goggles off. "You look a little young to be in my lesson," she added. "Your lesson?" the children asked. "Yes, I'm Mrs. Black, the chemistry teacher." "Oh! We thought you were..." Jemima began. Then, the bell rang. Break was over. "You should go to your lesson now," Mrs. Black said. "It was nice to meet you." "You, too," the children said. "I guess it's not always good to have a good imagination," Joshua said.

BLOCKBUSTERS

How to play

Divide the class into pairs and have them choose an object to mark their space during the game. Each student chooses a side of the board: the right side (with the snail) or the left side (without the snail). The first student chooses a word that is touching the line on his/her side of the board. He/She makes a sentence with the word and moves to any word that is touching the existing space. If he/she cannot make a sentence, he/she does not move to a new space. The second student does the same from his/her side of the board. Students do not need to make sentences for empty spaces. The first student to reach the line on the opposite side of the board wins the game.

Spartacus, the slave

Spartacus was a free citizen born in Thracia (present day Bulgaria). He served in the Roman army in Macedonia. Later, people captured him and sold him into slavery. He trained at the gladiator school of Batiatus in Capua.

In 73 BC, Spartacus and seventy other gladiators took some weapons and escaped. They lived near the top of Mount Vesuvius, and they attacked farms to steal food. Many slaves joined them. Soon, the Senate sent an army to stop the revolt, but Spartacus and his men won the battle.

Spartacus later defeated two armies and advanced north. He wanted to lead his men across the Alps to escape from Italy. In 72 BC, Spartacus had 120,000 men and was a big problem for Rome. The Senate finally asked two important generals for help: General Pompey from Spain and General Lucullus from northern Turkey. They finally defeated Spartacus in a major battle in the south of Italy. People think he died fighting the Roman soldiers, but they never found his body.

Yellowstone National Park is on top of one of the largest volcanoes in the world. It is America's first national park and every year millions of visitors come to admire its hot springs and geysers. Not many visitors know that these wonders are caused a few miles under ground by heat from a large reservoir of magma.

Between 1,000 and 3,000 earthquakes typically occur each year within Yellowstone National Park. Most earthquakes are too small to feel, but they reflect the active nature of the Yellowstone region, the most active volcanic area in the United States. The most notable earthquake in Yellowstone's recent history occurred in 1959. It had a magnitude of 7.5.

It caused $70 million in damages and killed 28 people.

Scientists say that Yellowstone Park is on a regular eruption cycle of 600,000 years. The last eruption was 640,000 years ago!

The next eruption could be 2,500 times the size of the Mount St. Helens eruption in 1980. Fortunately, the Yellowstone volcanic system shows no signs of a big eruption in the near future. In fact, the probability of a natural disaster happening at Yellowstone in the next few thousand years is very low.

INTERNATIONAL COOKING COMPETITION

Friday 12.00. All dishes must have an international flavour and must be prepared in the school's kitchen. The judge will be Mr. Howard, the headteacher. Register with Miss Smith by 3.00 pm today.

Sally registered and started to plan what she was going to cook.

"I think I'll make a Spanish omelette," she told her best friend.

"Good idea, they're delicious!"

The day before the competition, Sally went shopping with her mum.

The day of the competition arrived. Sally took all of her ingredients to school and at 12.00 she was ready to start cooking. She mixed the eggs, peeled the potatoes and chopped the chilli. Everything was going perfectly. She put all of the ingredients in a frying pan and started to cook the omelette.

"Stop cooking!" Miss Smith shouted a little later. Sally stopped, picked up a piece of chilli and ate it.

"Oh no!" she thought "The chilli is too spicy!"

Suddenly Mr. Howard arrived. He picked up a piece of the omelette with a big piece of chilli in it. As he chewed, he started turning red and he started to sweat! Then, he looked at Sally in surprise.

"Wow!" he said. "How did you know I liked spicy food? This is delicious!"

1 Benjamin Franklin was born in Boston, USA, in 1706, but lived most of his life in Philadelphia. He was an important politician and helped to write two historic documents: the Declaration of Independence and the American Constitution. But he was not only a respected politician. He was also a writer, a printer, a scientist and an inventor.

5 Franklin's inventions helped to solve problems in everyday life. One of them was bifocal glasses. Franklin had bad eyesight and needed two pairs of glasses to see both near and far. Eventually, he got tired of putting one pair on and taking the other off. He cut two pairs of glasses in half and put half of each lens in a single frame. Bifocal glasses were born.

10 Franklin's inventiveness led him to experiment with electricity. In 1752, he tied a key to a kite and flew it during a thunderstorm. He received a shock, but the experience led him to invent the lightning rod. Today, people use it to protect houses and buildings from storms.

William Shakespeare is the world's greatest English-language poet and playwright. His plays appear in many languages, and are performed more often than those of any other writer. Shakespeare's education wasn't exceptional either. He left school at around the age of fourteen.

When Shakespeare was eighteen, he married Anne Hathaway. They had three children: Susanna and twins Hamnet and Judith. But he didn't become a successful playwright until after he moved to London in 1586 and established himself as an actor. By 1592, he was recognized as a successful actor and poet.

He wrote at least thirty-six plays, including his famous tragedies: Hamlet, King Lear and Macbeth. In his later life, he wrote mainly romances, such as Romeo and Juliet.

Shakespeare retired from the theatre and went back home around 1613, where he died three years later. While Shakespeare's family line ended with the death of his granddaughter Elizabeth in 1670, his plays live on.

Young Learner & Trinity Exams

Tips for the Test - YLE and Trinity

The Cambridge Young Learner exams are designed for children aged from 7 to 12 years old. They are tested normally in their own school environment or an exam centre, and the exams all follow the same format. There are three levels: Starters, Movers and Flyers. In terms of grammar and lexis, the Flyers level is on par with the KET exams. The difference is that, unlike the exams for older students, children cannot fail the YLE. Every participant is given a diploma with badges in Reading, Writing, Listening and Speaking. The badges are coloured in depending on the success of the candidate.

Exams follow a very set format. The children never write on the exam papers, rather they answer on an answer sheet, usually with one word answers. They are tested in groups, except for the Speaking session, where the test is given individually.

The Lighthouse YLE CD-ROM includes three complete tests. These can be printed out in colour and used for classroom practice; one set can be used many times. The children write their answers on a piece of paper except for the last page of the Listening exams, which is used for colouring and therefore can only be used once.

Tips

- When doing the practice exams it is best to recreate similar circumstances as when the students will do the exam themselves, allow them the same amount of time, and have them practise exam techniques.
- The ESOL web site has an abundance of exam tips as well as more practice activities and information about the exams.
- The interactive activities on the CD-ROM are divided into the different sections of the exams. This way the teacher may choose to practice the same exam question in various exams or practise once complete exam, or pick and choose activities from different exams.

Trinity College London, Graded Examinations in Spoken English

The Trinity Examinations in Spoken English are one-to-one oral examinations with a native English speaking Trinity examiner, which test a student's speaking and listening skills. The exams provide an official recognition of a student's level of spoken English and are accepted by universities and employers worldwide. Candidates must be aged 7 or over.

The examinations are divided into a series of 12 oral exams which test the student's general conversation and ability to discuss prepared topics. The exam grades range from absolute beginner level to near native fluency.

Apart from being a recognised meter of a student's skills in English, the examination also works as a motivational tool encouraging students to practise and try to communicate in English.

Tips

- In each English lesson, ask general questions such as What day is it today? What's the weather like today? Is it spring or summer? How old are you?
- Encourage full answers whenever asking questions. T: What day is it today? SS: Tuesday. T: It's Tuesday.
- When asking questions, if a child does not know the answer, encourage them to say "I don't know" or "I can't remember" or "I'm sorry, I don't know the word in English", rather than remaining silent or saying "errr".
- Make question practice fun. Do it in the form of a team quiz and award points. Or ask questions at the end of a lesson, whoever answers correctly can line up first.
- Practise for the exam in regular, short sessions so candidates become more confident with the style of question and can answer more rapidly and naturally.

- When choosing a grade for candidates, consider the child's personality as well as their level of English. A shy child with a good level of English, may not do as well as a more outgoing child who speaks more spontaneously.
- Encourage the children to ask questions too. From Level 2 onwards they are expected to ask the examiner questions.

Initial Stage (Grades 1, 2 and 3)

Elementary Stage (Grades 4, 5 and 6)

This is a 10 minute exam which has 2 phases; a discussion on the candidate's pre-prepared topic and the conversation. Children should try to maintain a fluid conversation rather than just answering the examiner's questions.

Tips for preparing the topic

- Children should choose something that they are genuinely interested in and can talk easily about, (a hobby, pet, recent holiday...).
- They should collect all necessary photos or pictures well before the exam to give them time to plan the points and practice what to say.
- Children should not learn their topic by heart as they must speak naturally and spontaneously in the exam.
- Allow children the possibility of presenting their topic to the class and answering their questions to give them more confidence.
- The child should prepare several questions to ask the examiner related to their topic.
- Make a photocopy of the Topic Form for each student. Check that their information and spelling is correct before giving them the real Topic Form to complete.
